Business Context

Leadership and financial stakeholders need a clear, trusted view of gross revenue performance. Results should be segmented by fund, date, and team/department, with the ability to investigate the underlying transactions. The solution will reduce reliance on analysts.

Primary Users
- Executive, Board and financial leadership
- Development / revenue operations
- Analysts (forecasting, insight delivery)
- Fundraisers (performance monitoring)
- Database and Gift Administration (reconciling, data pulls)

Actions Supported
- Monitor YoY revenue performance against commitments.
- Segmentation to support organization-wide teams/departments.
- Identify fund-level trends and anomalies.
- Move directly from high-level summaries to transaction detail during discussions and meetings.

So What?
- Leadership can resolve questions in meeting, not after.
- Analysts spend less time on incidental data pulls, more time diagnosing and forecasting.
- Revenue discussions focus on performance, not arguing figures.
- Metrics remain stable even as users explore detail.
- The report becomes single, central Source of Truth, which other incremental reporting can directly reference as ecosystem populates.

My Role
- Structuring, cleaning and automating data from source.
- Designing dashboard and navigation model to support both high-level overview and operational drill-down.
- Implementing context-preserving drill-through, slicers, filters and tooltips so stakeholders can validate and navigate data independently and directly.
- Building views that balance monthly trends, commitments, and fund classification to reflect real-world, recurrent stakeholder questions.
- Establishing data governance accountability, including a shared data dictionary and links to CRM/FMS, to build trust, encourage ownership of business terms and act as enterprise-wide Source of Truth.

Applications
Data engineering: SQL, SQL Server, SSIS
Data modeling: star schema / T-SQL, Power Query transformations
Analytics & DAX: time intelligence, commitments vs actuals
Project Management: reverse engineering legacy system, documenting legacy architecture, stakeholder engagement, requirements gathering, design and deployment, user-testing
Governance: dictionary, ownership, access

This solution is designed to reduce dependence on analysts and IT department while increasing decision confidence through transparent, governed and context-preserving reporting.

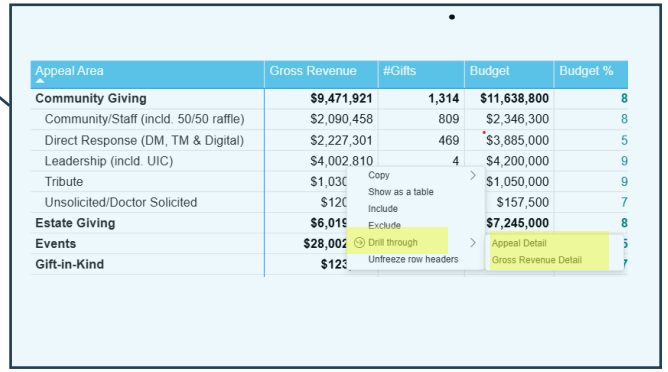
Design as Data Culture: Interactivity, Self-Service & Transparency

Built-in navigation, drill-through, and tooltips support traceable, accessible self-service analysis, based in shared definitions and understanding.

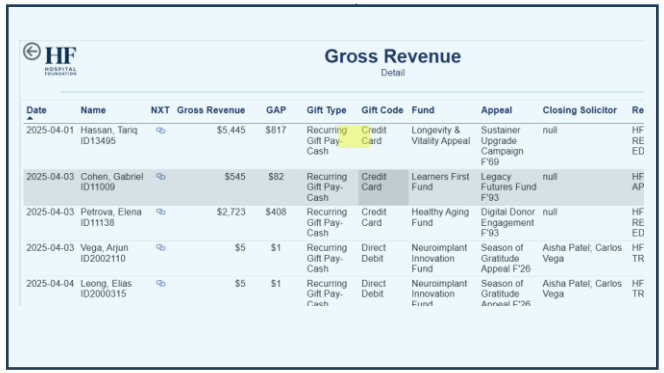
1. Navigation / Interaction

Supplies data direct-to-order, freeing up resources for Analysts

Stakeholders can move seamlessly between summary and transaction-level views using built-in navigation, drill-through, expandable hierarchies and tooltips, supplying quick outputs for ad-hoc data requests and enabling questions to be answered in context, i.e., in meeting or in response to an impromptu conversation.



Drill-through preserves fund, time, and classification filters.



Tabular transaction tables include direct links to the source (CRM/FMS), in this case Raiser's Edge.

1. Contextual Insight

Preserves analytical context while user explores detail

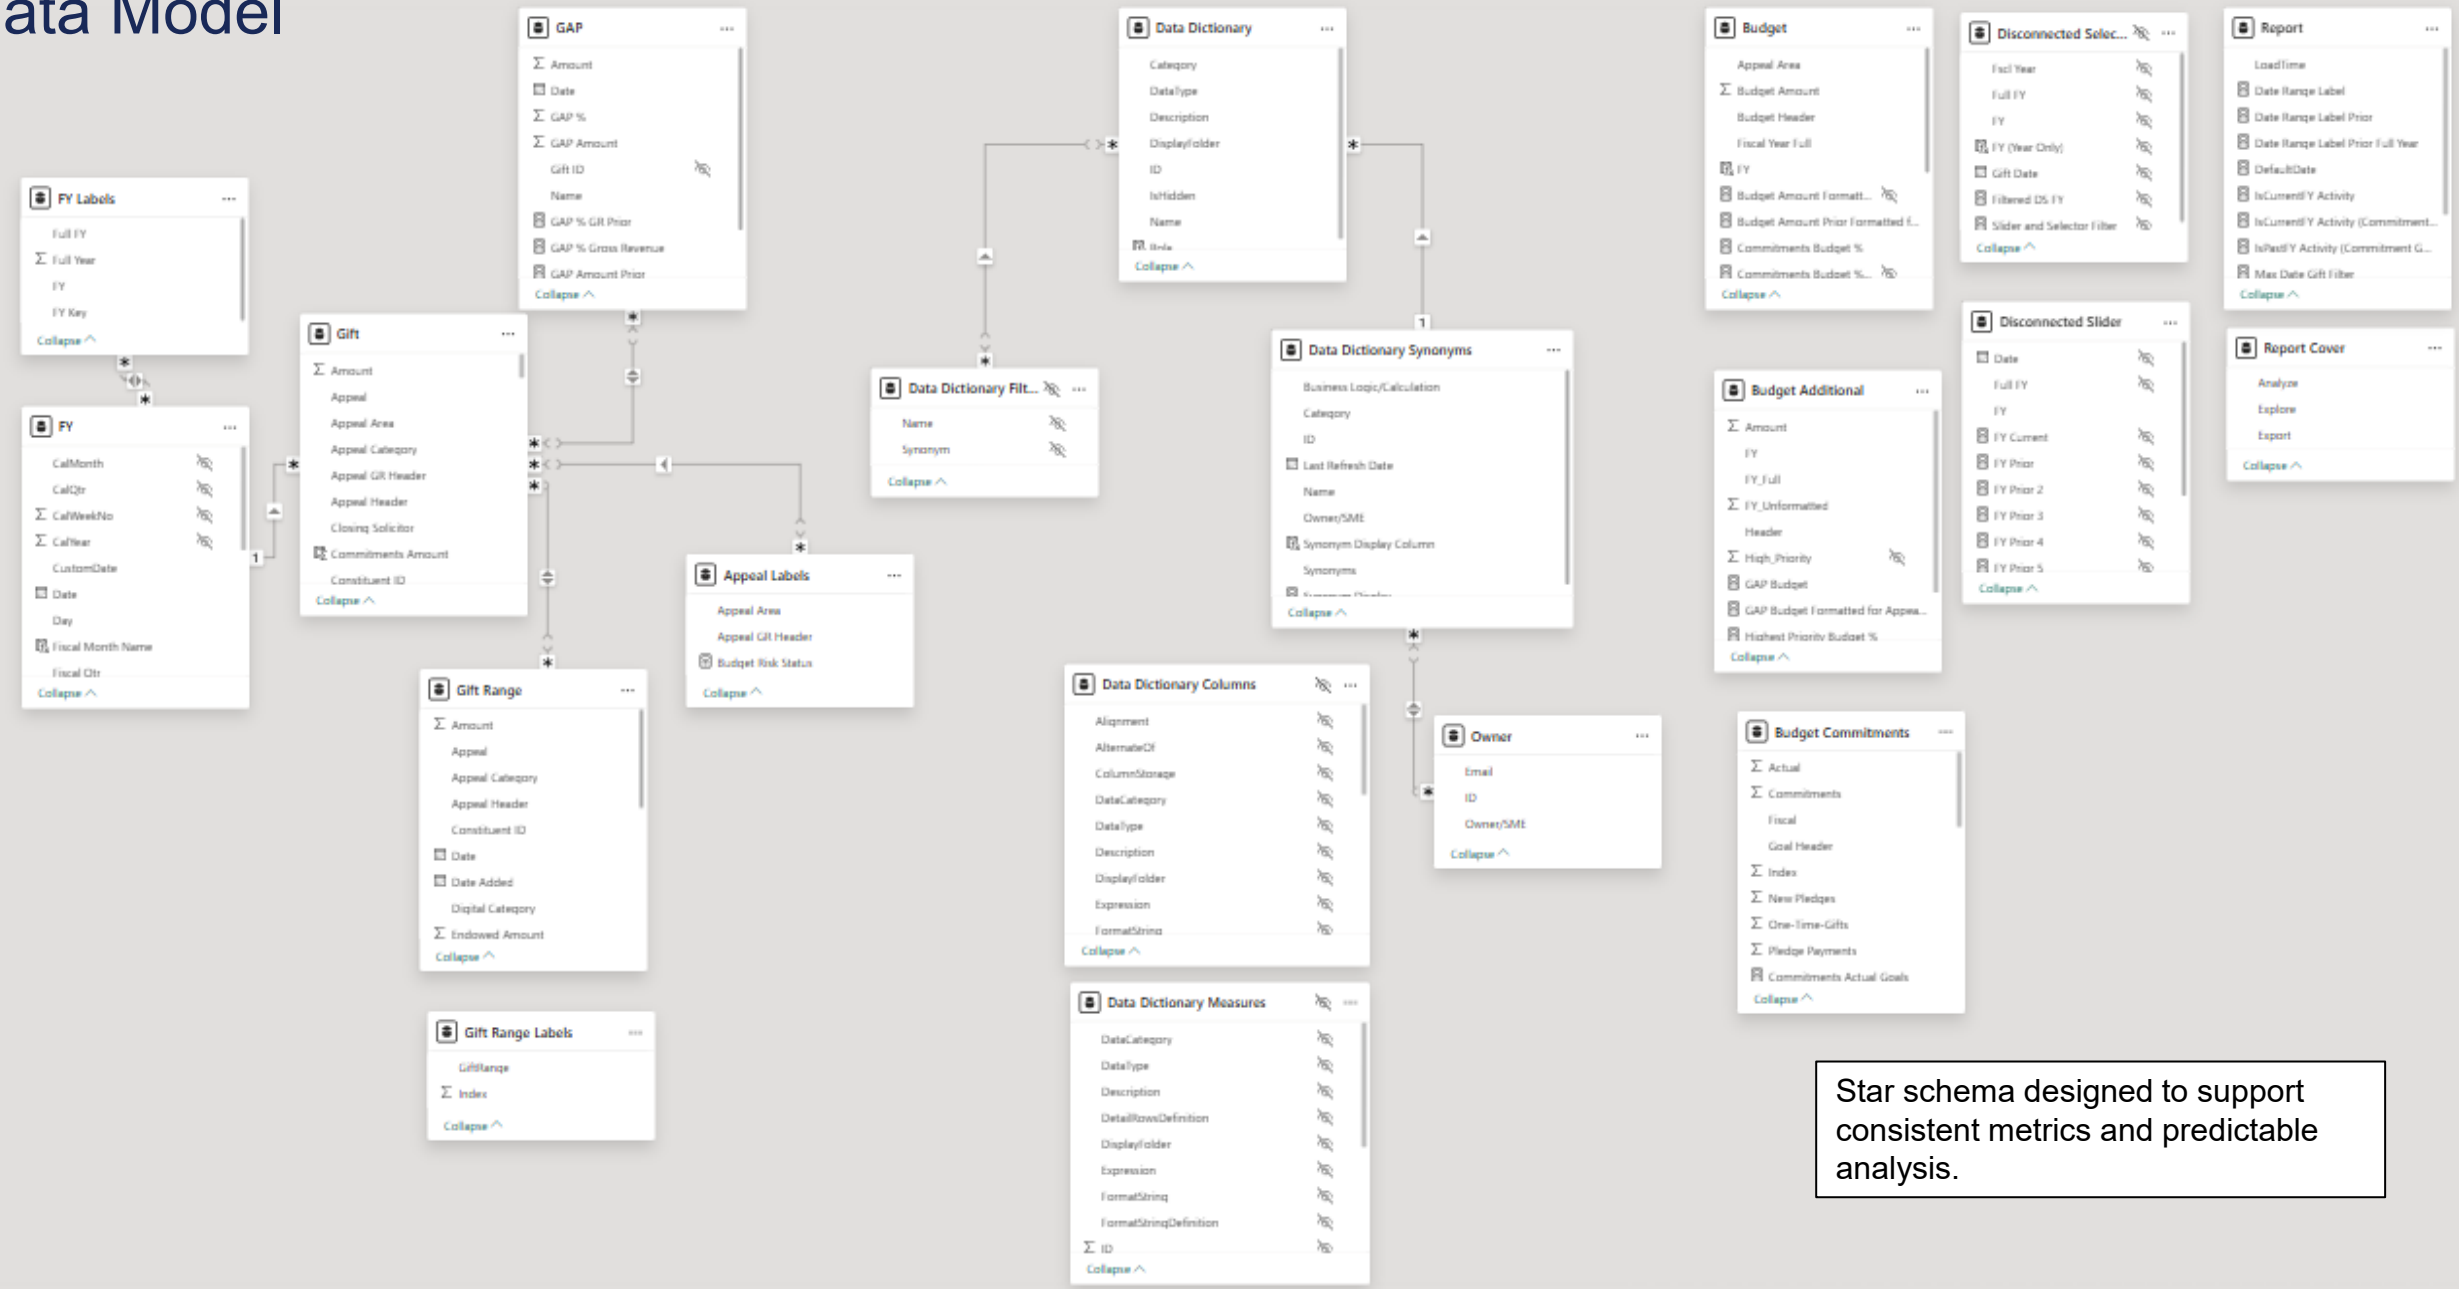
Example Data Dictionary Entry

Data Model



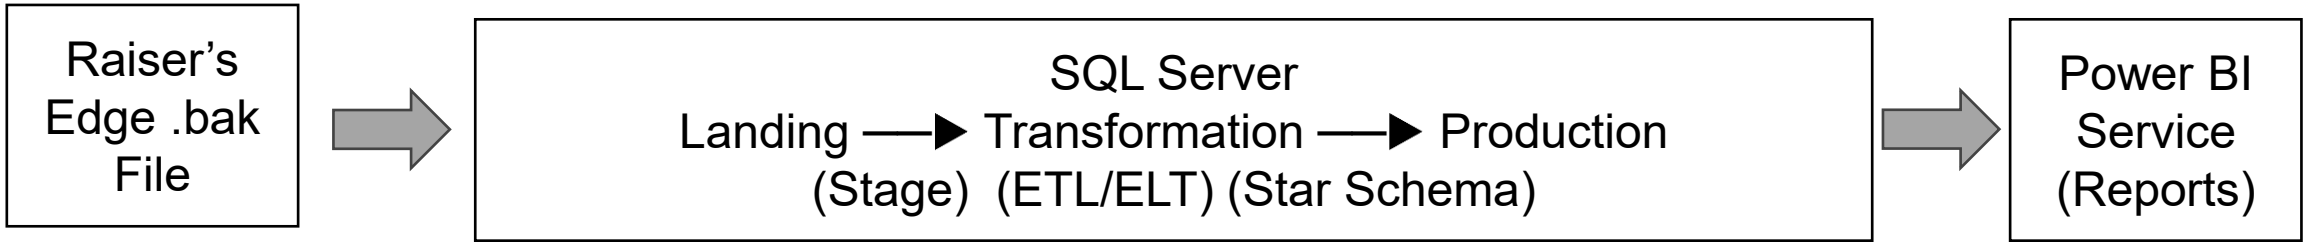
Star schema designed to support consistent metrics and predictable analysis.

End-to-End Data Architecture: Source to Power BI

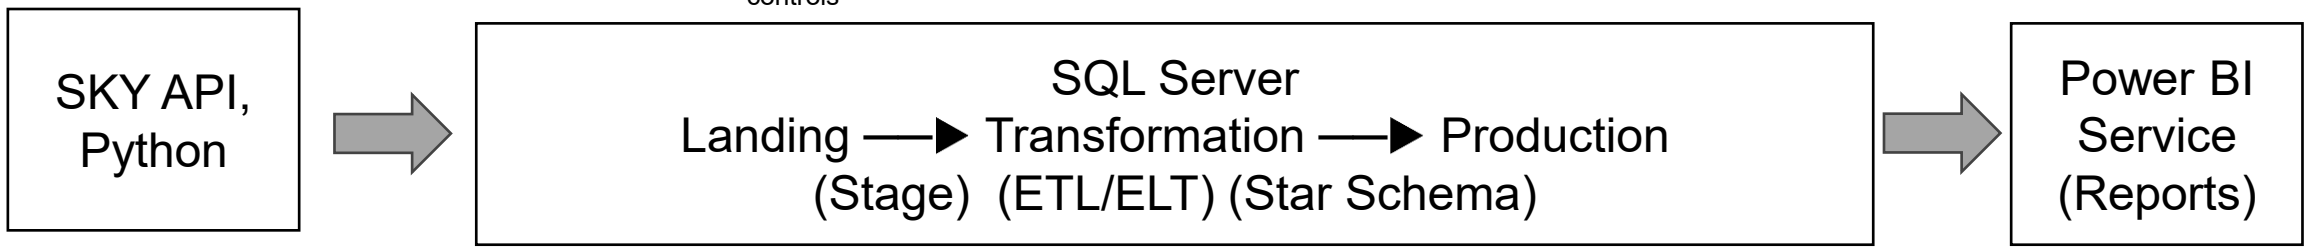
Option 1: on premise SQL Server backend

Pros
- Strong control over data, security, and governance
- Well-suited for complex transformations and star-schema modeling
- Stable, predictable performance for recurring reporting
- Familiar tooling for DBAs and enterprise IT teams

Cons
- Higher infrastructure and maintenance overhead
- Slower to adapt to new data sources or schema changes
- Scaling requires additional hardware and coordination
- Greater dependency on IT for changes and deployments



Option 2: SKY API and automated Python scripts

Pros
- More flexible and faster to iterate or extend
- Lower infrastructure footprint (lighter backend)
- Easier automation and scheduling of incremental loads
- Well-suited for modern, API-driven architectures


Cons
- Requires Python skillset and code governance discipline
- Error handling and monitoring must be explicitly built
- Performance tuning can be less predictable at scale
- May raise concerns for stakeholders expecting traditional DB controls
